A HALL AND OATES PODCAST

Dr. Naomi Schoenfeld is a medical anthropologist and social medicine nurse practitioner living in San Francisco. Her anthropological research intervenes at the intersection of global public health and science and technology studies. Her clinical work focuses on socially vulnerable and marginalized populations, including people experiencing homelessness and substance use disorders.

Mary Kay Holmes is an author/writer living in Los Angeles. Recently she completed, and is currently querying, an LGBTQ+ scifi novel about the life and death of Jesus Christ, so she's clearly not afraid of steep uphill battles. Additionally, she has been working on a television pilot with her writing partner that combines two of her defining characteristics — being a lover of true crime, and growing up in Albuquerque, NM. Also, for those in the know, the answer to the question “red or green?” is always green.
