

OUT OF TOUCH: A HALL AND OATES PODCAST

Out of Touch: A Hall and Oates Podcast

Hosted by: Naomi Schoenfeld and Mary Kay Holmes

Los Angeles/San Francisco, California / March 2022

Childhood friends, an anthropologist/nurse practitioner and a writer/stylist take their appreciation of Hall and Oates to the next level, embarking on a very serious endeavor to understand the world of Hall and Oates while understanding the world THROUGH Hall and Oates.

Join these two as they work toward their PhDs in Hall and Oates!

The most recent episode featured Alexandra Freedman Smith, a civil rights attorney and former Legal Director of the ACLU of New Mexico. Covering the song MANEATER, the three discuss everything from the song's lyrics and video to Flashdance and Saxsquatch.

Previous episodes have featured Brian Duck of Atelier Management to discuss mustaches and facial hair, Stephany Joy Ashley to explore sex work and the portrayal of women in 80's videos, and Paul Phojanakong who shared his experience with karaoke and the love of Hall and Oates in the Philippines.

Episodes are released weekly, on Sundays, and have a diverse audience with a wide range of interests. In only nine weeks the podcast has reached nearly 9,000 listeners, and the numbers continue to grow daily.

The podcast is available everywhere people listen, and has a large following in both India and the Philippines, followed closely by Mexico.

For more information please visit the pod's website:

<http://www.hallandoatespodcast.com>

Press section on the pod's website: <https://www.hallandoatespodcast.com/press-kit>

Social media:

Instagram @hallandoatespodcast

Facebook @hallandoatespodcast

TikTok @hallandoatespodcast

Twitter @hallandoatespod